

INNOVATION REC2TECH TECH TALKS

JUNE 24

LIVE 5PM

MEET TORRANCE EVANS

Torrance Evans is currently a software engineer at JP Morgan. His path is all but traditional. Torrance acquired a degree in business administration on a basketball scholarship and has a background in entrepreneurship, dabbling in real estate, car rentals and air bnb.

Torrance started his coding education by initially being self-taught and then testing into sponsored program that covered the entire cost of his tuition.

Torrance is also heavily involved in his community and is the chapter leader of Black Boys Code, a nonprofit org that holds workshops every month teaching you African American boys how to code and about all the opportunities that are available in the tech industry. Torrance is also on the board of directors for the Atlanta chapter of Black In Technology. Torrance has built community with his email list in which he sends out special networking events weekly in the ATL area, hosted by various companies to tech professionals looking to pivot, network, and/or acquire employment!

This is a great way for local students to learn about careers in tech and the pathways to those careers!
